Certificate in Global Studies

The Global Studies Certificate

The purpose of the Global Studies Certificate is to make students aware of the increasing interconnections, economic, political, social, cultural, historical, technological, and environmental, which have turned our world into a "global village". To meet the challenges of the 21st century, students today must possess a global perspective, being able to communicate in foreign languages, have a capacity to understand different cultures, provide a more refined understanding of world affairs, and to critically analyze global issues - in other words, to become "globally literate". Students who possess these global skills, will be able to successfully meet the global challenges ahead, i.e. being able to competitively bid for a growing number of careers with an international dimension throughout government, industry, and other non-governmental organizations.

The requirements for the Certificate are divided into four sections: (1) there is a Global Core requirement (9 hours), (2) Foreign Language (6 hours), (3) Area/Cultural Studies (6-9 hours), and (4), a Global Issues (6-9 hours) requirement. Generally, we credit classes taken in various study abroad programs, either UGA sponsored or not; however, classes taken with non-UGA sponsored study abroad programs must first be transferred to carry official UGA credit before they can be considered for the Global Studies Certificate.

1) Global Core requirement (9 semester hours): These are courses covering global topics from an analytical and theoretical perspective, i.e. the emphasis for these classes is on theory-building and analysis, rather than on description.

2) Foreign Language requirement (6 semester hours): The standard requirement for obtaining a second language (one in addition to English) is two courses in conversation and composition at or beyond the intermediate (2000) level.

Courses in literature and culture that are taught in a foreign language will also be accepted. This requirement will be waived for foreign students who have competency in languages which are not regularly offered at the university.

3) Area/Cultural Studies (6-9 semester hours): These courses deal either with a clearly proscribed geographical area and/or with "life situation" topics, such as gender studies, feminism, the African/American experience, Native Americans, or topics dealing with the cultural identity of different communities and other peoples.

4) Global Issues (6-9 semester hours): Five elements constitute "global issues": (1) courses related to Peace, (2) courses related to Environmental Issues, (3) courses dealing with issues of Development in a wider sense, (4) Human Rights issues, and (5) issues dealing with international Political Economy. The following courses are representative examples of the Global Issues area:

Most undergraduate students should be able to earn a Certificate without adding hours to their regular program of study by selecting appropriate core, major, and elective courses. Altogether, 30 semester hours or the equivalent is required for the certificate. Moreover, a grade of "B" or above is required in all courses used for the certificate. All classes have to be approved by the Coordinator of the Certificate Program.
