COURSE DESCRIPTION & OBJECTIVES:

The aim of this class is to provide you with a greater understanding of the concept of human rights, including their importance in international politics and the various means by which these rights might be either violated or protected. Further, we will also discuss many of the methods used to study and evaluate respect for human rights cross-nationally. As such, by the end of this course, you should:

- Have a strong grasp on the various definitions of human rights, including comparisons between universal and culturally contingent perspectives, as well as the ability to clearly express and justify your preferred definition of human rights and explain its implications
- Have gained a general understanding of many of the sources of human rights violations, as well as the many ways in which human rights may be violated and the cross-national extent of the problem of human rights violations
- Be able to list and discuss several types of efforts aimed at improving respect for human rights, including the efforts associated with international law, powerful states, and non-governmental organizations
- Be capable of understanding and participating in the public debate over the many issues discussed in this class
- Have an improved ability to make logical, convincing oral and written arguments

COURSE EXPECTATIONS

EXAMS (55%):

Midterm Exams (2 X 12.5% of your grade) & Final Exam (30% of your grade)

There will be three major tests given this semester. Each exam is cumulative. The first midterm exam is tentatively scheduled for Thursday, February 22. The second midterm exam is tentatively scheduled for Thursday, March 29. If we decide to take the final exam in class, the final exam will be given on Tuesday, May 1.

Reflection Paper (Expository Essay) (15%):

After the first exam, I will supply you with a set of prompts. On the basis of one of these prompts, you will be expected to produce an expository essay of between 5 and 8 pages, utilizing at least 5 scholarly sources encountered in the class (no outside sources are necessary). The final paper will be due on Tuesday, April 24.

Expository essays should NOT be simple summaries of someone else's argument. Instead, these papers should be argumentative in nature; you should strive to make ONE point in each paper and support it with evidence. In particular, expository essays in this course should point out a particular strength or weakness that exists in others' arguments, synthesize information from multiple sources to present a new argument, or some combination thereof. That is, the key ingredient for a good grade on an expository essay is a strong argument from you. Essays should be no more than 8 double-spaced pages in length, with 12-point font and one inch margins. A discussion of the structure of an expository essay can be found at <https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/685/02/>.

More information on the reflection papers will be provided later in the semester.

Human Rights Data Project (15% of your grade)

As a part of this course, you will gain experience assessing government human rights practices by working as a coder for a human rights data project. Human rights data like these are utilized by scholars and students who seek to test theories about the causes and consequences of human rights violations, as well as policy makers and analysts who seek to estimate the human rights effects of a wide variety of institutional changes and public policies. Indeed, previous data projects that I have worked on have been utilized by hundreds of governments and organizations worldwide, including the United States' Millennium Challenge Corporation (MCC), the World Bank, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the European Commission, and the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), among others. As such, your work on this project is very serious and important, with implications that go far beyond your grade in this course.

For your assignment, you will be working with the Sub-National Analysis of Repression Project (SNARP). SNARP is a new National Science Foundation funded data collection effort aimed at generating standards-based measures that capture variation in physical integrity rights abuse within a state's borders. For this project, we rely on a mix of expert coding, theoretically informed measurement models, and cutting-edge computational techniques, which are capable of coding and then linking together the diverse information drawn from a rich set of primary source documents. Using this information, we generate standards-based measures for each of several specific types of physical integrity violations (arbitrary detention, torture, disappearances, and extrajudicial execution) as well as a combined indicator for these abuses for each first-order subnational administrative unit within a state. This level of analysis brings us closer to the level at which most citizens encounter the government's legal, political, and bureaucratic authority.

I will ask you to read human rights reports, and, using guidelines I will provide, extract information about respect for certain human rights. Later in the semester, you, another student who is working with the same countries and rights as you (for reasons I will explain in class), and I (or a graduate assistant) will meet to go over your work and reconcile differences where necessary. Then, finally, you will prepare a short report summarizing your work. Your grade for all of this will be divided into three components:

Timeliness (5% of your grade) – This grade is primarily based on whether all data assignments are completed and turned on time and on-time completion of all other related assignments. Successfully meeting these three requirements should result in a perfect score for timeliness. Some of the coding deadlines can be found in the class schedule below; however, I retain the right to change this schedule as necessary.

Conscientiousness (10% of your grade) - I will evaluate how conscientious you were when you collected your data by observing your class attendance on training days, reviewing your notes, and taking note of your preparedness for our reconciliation meetings. You should keep careful notes of why you made the decisions you made in data collection. These notes will be used during the reconciliation meetings with your partner and me, so you should bring a copy of those notes to the meetings where reconciliation will take place. This will be discussed in greater detail in class.

You will encounter much more material and discussion about all aspects of the human rights data project over the course of the next few months, much of which will occur in class.

Attendance & Participation (15% of your grade)

Attendance and participation are a necessary condition for satisfactory achievement in this class. I am here for guidance and to share knowledge with you, which I will do extensively on the days that I lecture. However, the best way for you to learn in this course is to engage with the material and to debate and discuss it at length with your peers in class. Thus, excellence in participation means more than just talking a lot in class; rather, it requires that your participation be high in both quality and quantity. In order to pull this off, you should do your best to be a critical reader. Critical readers are (Schumm, J. S., and Post, S. A. 1997. Executive Learning, 282; Richards 2006):

- willing to spend time reflecting on the ideas presented in their reading assignments
- able to evaluate and solve problems while reading rather than merely compile a set of facts to be memorized
- logical thinkers
- diligent in seeking out the truth
- eager to express their thoughts on a topic
- seekers of alternative views on a topic
- open to new ideas that may not necessarily agree with their previous thought on a topic
- able to base their judgments on ideas and evidence
- able to recognize errors in thought and persuasion as well as to recognize good arguments
- willing to take a critical stance on issues
- able to ask penetrating and thought-provoking questions to evaluate ideas
- in touch with their personal thoughts and ideas about a topic
- willing to reassess their views when new or discordant evidence is introduced and evaluated
- able to identify arguments and issues
- able to see connections between topics and use knowledge from other disciplines to enhance their reading and learning experiences

I will regularly take attendance in class. I will also take note of both the quantity and the quality of your contributions to class discussions. If necessary, I may also intermittently give brief quizzes in class in order to gauge the degree to which you are engaging with and understanding the material. As a result, it is important that you stay caught up on the readings at all times.

Finally, I should note that points for attendance and participation are not simply given out; they are earned. Grades in my classes are often raised by attendance and participation. However, others have found their grade lowered when they paid attendance and participation little attention. As such, it is in your best interest to attend class and participate in discussion where appropriate.

COURSE POLICIES

1. Attendance

As explained above, attendance and participation make up a sizable portion of your grade for the class. However, I am aware that, at times, events beyond our control conspire to keep us from meeting our normal, everyday obligations; in these cases, I grant excused absences. An excused absence is one where you have an officially documented college-sanctioned event (sports / conference / trip), a documented medical excuse (for you only) or proof of a deceased direct relative. For our purposes, “direct relative” includes mother, father, sister, brother, or grandparent living anywhere, or other relative (aunt, uncle, cousin) living at the student’s permanent residence. UNEXCUSED ABSENCES WILL RESULT IN THE RECEIPT OF A ZERO FOR ATTENDANCE & PARTICIPATION FOR THAT DAY.

In the event that an excused absence keeps you from attending class on the day a test is given, the test will be made up at the nearest possible time to the test date. Once again, an excused absence is one where you have an officially documented college-sanctioned event (sports / conference / trip), a documented medical excuse (for you only) or proof of a deceased direct relative. For our purposes, “direct relative” includes mother, father, sister, brother, or grandparent living anywhere, or other relative (aunt, uncle, cousin) living at the student’s permanent residence. Excused absences are the only reason I will accept for offering a make-up exam. UNEXCUSED ABSENCES ON TEST DAYS WILL RESULT IN THE RECEIPT OF A ZERO FOR THE TEST.

2. Writing Style Rules

When writing papers for this class, you should follow these rules. Failure to do so could result in a reduction of your grade.

- All papers should be double-spaced and in 12-point font, printed on pages with 1” margins all around.
- Title pages, graphs, tables, figures, references, appendices, etc. do not count toward your paper’s length.
- You are required to use the American Political Science Association (APSA) style format for your papers. The full style guide can be found on our class’s ELC page.

3. Cell Phones and Other Noise-Making Devices

All cell phones and other devices that make noise must be turned off or put on silent/vibrate upon entering the classroom. Repeated unnecessary disruptions of class caused by such devices may negatively affect a student’s grade.

4. Academic Honesty

As a University of Georgia student, you have agreed to abide by the University’s academic honesty policy, “A Culture of Honesty,” and the Student Honor Code. All academic work must meet the standards described in “A Culture of Honesty” found at: www.uga.edu/honesty. Lack of knowledge of the academic honesty policy is not a reasonable explanation for a violation. Questions related to course assignments and the academic honesty policy should be directed to the instructor.

5. Class Discussion and Debate

Political debates and discussions can become quite heated. This passion is part of what makes the study of politics fun. However, the fun ends where personal attacks and disrespect begin. All students are expected to be courteous and considerate of their classmates. Disrespectful language and personal attacks will not be tolerated.

6. Communicating with the Instructor

My primary method of communicating with you outside of class time/office hours will be thorough email. You have each been assigned an email address by the university and will be held responsible for regularly checking this account. Assignment changes, important dates, and other valuable information may be sent to this account over the course of the semester. Please check it regularly.

I have posted office hours from 10 AM until 11 AM on Mondays and Tuesdays. During this time period, you should feel free to come by my office at Candler Hall 323 and discuss any questions you may have about the class. If these times do not work for you, I would be more than happy to set up an appointment.

7. Staying Informed

In this course, we will often discuss current political events and issues. It is therefore important that you stay informed. Your ability to take the news of the day and view it through the lens of what you are learning will be a vital component of your success in this class. You may get your information from whatever outlet you choose. However, it is recommended that at least some of your information comes from a national news source, such as The New York Times (www.nytimes.com), The Washington Post (www.washingtonpost.com), CNN (www.cnn.com), or NPR (www.npr.org). Also, academic blogs are often great places to encounter discussions of current events through the lens of the things we are talking about in class. A few political science blogs that may be useful for this course are The Monkey Cage (<https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/monkey-cage>), The Quantitative Peace (www.quantitativepeace.com/), Political Violence @ a Glance (<http://politicalviolenceataglance.org/>), and The Duck of Minerva (<http://duckofminerva.com/>), among others.

8. Changes to the Syllabus

The course syllabus is a general plan for the course; deviations announced to the class by the instructor may be necessary. As such, I reiterate the absolute necessity that you (1) come to class and (2) check your email regularly.
