Course Description

This course deals with the role of international institutions, broadly defined, in facilitating cooperation between governments. We will cover formal organizations, as well as international law, with emphasis on their capacity to solve general problems of cooperation in international politics. We will discuss how international organizations help governments coordinate policies across a range of issues. Topics covered include international trade, monetary policy, environmental regimes, military alliances, the laws of war, conflict intervention, and international human rights law.

Course Objectives

This is not a history course, though we will occasionally discuss historical events. The purpose of this course is not to trace the development of particular international organizations. Rather, the goal is to understand 1) the role of international institutions in facilitating cooperation among governments across a broad range of policy areas and 2) how we can assess the impact that international organizations have on government policy. This entails learning something about general theories of cooperation in social science as well as basic data analysis.

Required Reading

There will be no textbook in this class. There will be 1-2 articles/book chapters for every week. All readings will be posted on blackboard. Students are expected to read the assigned material.

During two weeks of the semester, students will submit a short (1-2 pages, single spaced) essay in response to a general question related to the week's topic/readings. The question for the week will be provided on Monday, and the response must be submitted via email no later than 8 p.m. on Friday. Students choose which weeks they turn in essays, but must submit their first essay by the end of Week 8 (September 30th).

Attendance

Attendance will be taken randomly 10 times throughout the semester. One point will be deducted from your final grade for each of these days you miss.

Makeup Exams

An absence from any exam will result in a zero for that exam. Makeup exams will not be given for any reason. However, the lowest exam grade will be dropped when calculating final grades. This means that everyone may miss one exam and not be penalized.
