Course Overview

This course will serve as a first step for students in understanding and analyzing global issues and their complexities. The course is designed as a survey of global issues and to understand individual, local, national, and global aspects of the various issues. By the end of the semester, students should be able to use various conceptual tools to better analyze and explain the challenges posed by global issues, and discuss potential individual, social, or policy-based solutions. The course also provides students with an opportunity to understand and critique academic research papers, and articles, and apply theoretical concepts to real-world events and questions.

Course Objectives

- To introduce students to the main theoretical frameworks and actors to analyze global issues
- To provide a window into various global issues from different perspectives
- To familiarize students with reading and critiquing news articles and academic research papers
- To understand the strengths and limitations of various potential solutions to global issues
- To improve students' ability to discuss and write about the complexities of global issues

Attendance and Participation (10%)

Participation contains two graded components. First, attendance is mandatory. You are permitted two unexcused absences over the course of the semester. Consistently arriving late to class will also result in a lower participation grade.

This will be a seminar style class for the most part. I expect students to have completed the readings assigned prior to class and participate actively in class, answering and raising questions about the readings. Both the quality and frequency of participation are taken into consideration when grading student participation. If you are not comfortable speaking in class, you may earn participation points in other ways, such as speaking with me individually during office hours, emailing me with your thoughts about the readings, and sharing your thoughts on relevant news articles you found.

Discussion Leadership (5%)

Two students are expected to lead discussion for twenty minutes once a week. Students will have an opportunity to sign up for the discussion they would like to lead in the first week of classes. The pair leading the discussion will not only read the assigned article(s) thoroughly, but will present the class with discussion questions that help understand and critique the article in the context of the concepts learned in the course.

The two students should send a list of six discussion questions to the instructor 48 hours prior to the class for approval.

Reading Quizzes (5%)

Weekly quizzes will be administered in-class or on ELC throughout the semester to ensure that students have mastered the core concepts of themes covered in class. The two lowest quiz grades will be dropped.

News Reflections (5%)

This component requires students to find, read, and reflect on a current news article that relates to a topic covered in the course (preferably from previous week or given week). This element of the course is intended to train the students to be aware of news and develop critical thinking skills. Each student should complete 6 news reflections by the end of the semester.

This assignment requires the student to submit a 1-2 page reflection by Tuesday 9:30am of the week to the ELC Assignment Dropbox (under the Tools tab). The reflection should start with the major content of the news article and how it relates to course material. You may critique the news article or say how the article supports or challenges a concept or theory discussed in class. Students should ensure that the news article was published in a credible news source. More details are available in the grading rubric that will be provided by the instructor.

Writing Assignments (30% of your grade)

These assignments provide you with opportunities to delve deeper into the global issues already covered in class. A total of three will be due throughout the semester at various times. The papers should be between 5 and 6 pages, not including title page, figures or tables, and references. You should summarize a specific global issue and then go more in-depth than the readings or class discussions. You could also summarize how multiple global issues intersect in certain geographic or policy areas. Each assignment should cover at least one manifestation of the global issue for an individual, group, country, or group of countries. Each assignment will count for 10% of your total grade. You will be provided a rubric to clarify the instructor's expectations for this assignment. Late work will not be accepted except in extreme circumstances (with documentation). These assignments should be submitted on ELC Assignment Dropbox.

Group Project I (10%)

This project requires each student, along with two or three other peers, to present the most important historical, cultural, and political characteristics of one specific manifestation of the global issue of the week. The presentation should take no longer than 15 minutes. The group is also required to lead a discussion or introduce an interactive component for the 10 minutes following the presentation.

Exams (35%)

There will be two exams over the course of the semester. Exam 1 will cover material covered in the first half of the semester and will account for 15% of your final course grade. The final exam will be cumulative in nature and will account for 20% of your final course grade.

Grading Scale

Letter grades relate to the total percentage of points you receive in the class as follows:

93-100: A	73-76: C
90-92: A-	70-72: C-
87-89: B+	67-69: D+
83-86: B	63-66: D
80-82: B-	60-62: D-
77-79: C+	00-59: F

Course Conduct

General guidelines

All cell phones and other devices that make noise must be turned off or put on silent/vibrate during class. Repeated unnecessary disruptions of class caused by such devices may negatively affect a student's grade.

Refrain from distracting activities such as sleeping, reading, studying for other classes, browsing online shopping stores, email, or social network websites. Such activities will not only be counterproductive to the objectives of the class, but will also negatively affect your participation grade.

This is a discussion-intensive course where you may share your beliefs and opinions. While I encourage open and active discussions, it is imperative that you respect the opinions of others in your class. Try to keep your rhetoric reasonable, responsible, and respectful. These steps can ensure that we will have an exciting and insightful semester together!

When you have questions about the course material, or have any other concerns about the class, feel free to drop by during office hours.

Academic Honesty

As a student at University of Georgia, you have agreed to abide by the University's academic honesty policy "A Culture of Honesty" and the Student Honor Code. All submitted academic work must meet the standards described in "A Culture of Honesty" and be wholly the individual work of the student submitting the work. Students should familiarize themselves with at www.uga.edu/honesty. Lack of knowledge of the academic honesty policy is not a reasonable explanation for a violation. If you have any questions about plagiarism or academic honesty with respect to work for this class, please contact the instructor.

Disability Policy or Health Related issues

Students with a disability or other health related issues who need a class accommodation should make arrangements with the Office of Student Disabilities and speak with me as soon as possible.

Email Correspondences

Please begin the title of all your email correspondences "INTL 3300 [your last name] [reason for correspondence] [level of priority]". This will ensure quick and effective responses to your emails.
