Course Description: Comparative political themes in political science. The transition from feudalism to capitalism, state building, democracy, and interaction between political institutions and cultures in various politics. Examples will be drawn from developed, communist/post-communist and developing political systems.

PREREQUISITE: POLS 1101 or INTL 1100

“Those who only know one country know no country.” – Seymour Lipset

Raise d'Être of the Course: The crux of comparative political science is this: by examining two or more countries in the light of various political theories – and by comparing two or more themes and/or functions across countries – one learns from the differences and similarities uncovered. Such analysis can also lead to an understanding of one's own political system, and therefore one can begin to ask and investigate political questions that have a direct bearing on one's own life and values. Undertaking this process requires disciplined investigation and critical thinking skills, which we shall work to develop throughout the course.

What We'll Do in This Course: Over the semester, we shall undertake an examination of the different approaches – both theoretical and thematic – to the study of comparative politics. Our study will be grounded in the theoretical foundations of the field (cultural, structural, and functional) as we consider the following:

- how political culture and history affect politics in a given society;
- how political institutions of a society are established and how and why they may change;
- and finally, how a society's political economy is organized and how it can affect potential political outcomes (such as elections or legislation).

Once these foundations are understood, we shall endeavour to examine and compare a number of political systems from around the world, looking at their various cultures/histories, political institutions, and political economies and evaluating how differences in and interactions among these three factors have given rise to different outcomes from one country to the next. Our emphasis will be on the following areas/systems:

- Advanced, Industrialized Democracies (e.g., Western Europe; the US)
- Authoritarian States (e.g., China, Cuba)
- Newly Industrialized States (e.g., South-East Asia; India, Brazil)
- Developing Countries (e.g., Africa, Latin America)

In our investigation of these other systems and countries, we shall also compare them to the case of the United States, which we shall use as a base reference. As such, we shall engage in critical assessments of the differences and similarities we find, asking whether or not changes in our own political system or in other countries' systems may provide viable answers to some of the current political problems and controversies that many countries face today (such as immigration policy, environmental policy, the power of protest, and political violence).

My Expectations of You: As an introduction to an entire subfield of political science, this course will be covering a great deal of ground, and we may not be able to cover adequately a theme or area of the world that is of interest to you. There will be, however, opportunity for you to delve more deeply into particular areas of interest in the group project, as will be described below.

It is essential that you come to class prepared: each day's assignments must be completed before class, and each student must be ready to conduct a quality discussion on the day's material. Also, lectures will not be mere repetition of the reading material, and students will be expected to come to class ready to expand on the readings and assignments. In effect, we shall be building the lectures together, so each student must be engaged in the discussions.

A note on writing: Finally, please be aware that there will be a fair amount of writing in this course (group project reports, essays, questions – see below). Writing is an essential means of communicating and establishing ideas, and the ability to write clearly and convincingly will serve you well no matter the career path you may take. I will not deduct points from your grades for bad grammar unless the poor use of grammar hinders comprehension. Proof reading and visits to the UGA Writing Center (writingcenter.english.uga.edu/) or our SPIA Librarian, Elizabeth White (elwhite1@uga.edu) are strongly encouraged.

Ground Rules:

1. First, learn what the heck plagiarism is (see www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/plagiarize). Work submitted for this course must be your own work; all necessary citations must be properly provided when you cite anyone or anything else: All academic work must meet the standards contained in "A Culture of Honesty." Students are responsible for knowing these standards before performing any academic work. For more information, see: honesty.uga.edu/ahpd/culture_honesty.htm. To reiterate: any incidents of plagiarism or intellectual fraud (see www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/fraud) will be treated as the most serious offense. If you need help in determining what constitutes plagiarism and how to avoid committing this most egregious intellectual sin, please consult the following: guides2.galib.uga.edu/subject-guide/23-Plagiarism-Resources.
2. The use of laptops, cell phones, iPods, or any other electronic device will not be allowed during class. Period. No exception. We shall be doing this old-school, ladies and gentlemen. If you cannot be disconnected for 50 minutes thrice a week, do not take this class.
3. You may accrue up to three (3) unexcused absences without penalty. If you are absent for more than three class meetings and do not bring a valid (per University policy) written excuse, your participation grade will be lowered by one letter grade per unexcused absence. As participation is a part of your grade (see below), you cannot participate if you do not attend class.
4. If you miss a class, it is your responsibility to get the notes you missed from other classmates. I shall also be available to answer your questions during my office hours, but do not expect me to give the entire lecture again to you personally.
5. If you are absent on a day when an assignment is due, you must provide an acceptable excuse per University policy in order to make up the assignment. If you will be absent, I would appreciate an e-mail notification ahead of time, if possible.
6. The withdrawal deadline is Monday, 20 March. Please be aware that if you do not attend the majority of classes and/or do not turn in the majority of work by that date, I am compelled to assign you a grade of "WF." If you have any issues that keep you from completing your work or attending class, please contact me: I know things come up, and we may be able to work together to find an appropriate plan of action.

7. Our discussions may touch upon ideas or topics on which we may not all agree – in fact, this will probably be the case. Each student is expected to be courteous and respectful of the viewpoints and ideas of all others in the class, although disagreements are certainly acceptable. In discussions, you should make an effort to provide either a theoretical or empirical basis for your comments – this is a major part of becoming a critical thinker, and it is part of the goal of this course.
8. This syllabus is a general plan; it may be necessary for me to amend any part of the syllabus as we proceed through the course. Announcements will generally be made in class and on e-Learning Commons (ELC), so you should be sure to attend each class, and to check the course Web site on ELC often.

Texts:

We shall use one main textbook for the course, indicated in the class schedule below as Essentials:

O’Neil, Patrick. Essentials of Comparative Politics. Fifth Edition (New York: WW Norton & Company, Inc.) 2015.
ISBN: 978-0-393-93897-5 (paperback*)

We shall also use an optional case studies accompanying text (from which we shall read several chapters on individual countries), indicated in the class schedule below as Cases:

O’Neil, Patrick, Karl Fields, and Don Share. Cases in Comparative Politics. Fifth Edition (New York: WW Norton & Company, Inc.) 2012.
ISBN: 978-0-393-93754-1 (paperback*)

* There are also e-book versions of both texts available, if you prefer. See me for the ISBNs, if interested.

Additional Readings:

There will also be selected readings from other texts and news articles, some of which are listed in the course schedule below, and some which will be determined later. All of these readings will be posted on the course’s site on the eLC. Please NOTE: The readings that will be posted on the course Web site are for use by students in this course ONLY! Please do not share these copyrighted materials with others, else I shall receive a nasty “cease and desist order” from the publishers. Not fun.

Grading:

Quiz(zes)	→	10%
Film Essay	→	15%
Group Project:
Presentation	→	10%
Report	→	15%
Peer Evaluations	→	5%
Journals/Questions	→	10%
Participation	→	10%
Office Visit	→	5%
Final Exam	→	20%

Total: 100%

Grading Scale:

Grading for the course will be deemed as follows:

>=94	A	84-86	B	74-76	C	<60	F
90-93	A-	80-83	B-	70-73	C-
87-89	B+	77-79	C+	60-69	D

Contested Grades:

If you have a concern about the grade you received for a test or assignment, you must submit a type-written explanation of the problem along with the test or assignment in question within one week of my returning the assignment to you. I shall re-evaluate your work and assign a “new” grade, taking into account your written explanation (which, in essence then, becomes part of the re-grade). Note, however, that this process may result in the same grade, a higher grade, or indeed a lower grade for that assignment. You are allowed this one appeal for each graded assignment; the re-grade will then stand. If the issue is merely a matter of an error in calculation on my part, you need not submit a type-written request for this correction, but you do need to notify me of this error within one week of receiving the graded assignment back from me. Capisce? Please see me if you do not understand this policy or if you have questions about it.

Late Work:

Outside of an accepted University excuse, under unusual circumstances, and on a case-by-case individual basis, I may accept late work if you have communicated to me before the due date that the work is to be late. All late work must then be received within three days of the original due date, or a zero for the assignment will be given. In all cases, it is your responsibility to ensure that I receive your work – not mine. If, for any reason, you are unsure if your work has been received by me, it is up to you to follow up. I do reserve the right to refuse late work.

Notes on Assignments:

Each student will work as part of a group on a project consisting of a class presentation and an individual written report on a pair of countries that the group selects to compare. Each student will also prepare and submit a film essay on one of the films we view in class. Details concerning the group project and film essay assignments will be discussed in class in advance of the respective assignments. Additional assignments may also be given during class, either to be completed in class or turned in during the next class session. These assignments will be announced in class and posted on the course Web site, and will count towards your participation grade.

The final exam will feature multiple choice and short answer questions. Further information about the format of the final exam will be discussed in class as we near the end of the semester.

Classes will consist of lecture, group activities and work sessions, presentations, guest speakers, and film viewings (consult the schedule of assignments and classes below).

Participation:

As one of the objectives of the course is to develop better critical thinking skills and to be able to communicate concepts and ideas more effectively, participation counts heavily toward your final grade. Silently attending lectures and completing all assignments on time earns you a C- or 70% (so keep this in mind with regard to how late you get in the night before we have class). A higher grade is contingent on active participation. I define participation broadly, for example: raising questions or expressing confusion about the material; interacting with me outside of the classroom; posting interesting articles on the eLC course Web site that relate to our course material. If you are concerned about participation, contact me and we can discuss strategies to raise your grade, but do not wait until the last day of class to do this, as it will be too late by then!

Note that part of your participation grade (5%) is an office visit to see me at some point before classes end. If you have a question or comment about the course or an assignment, or if you would like to discuss some issue from class in greater detail, this would be an excellent opportunity to do just that. Note that if you wait until the end of the semester to come see me, you may not be able to do so if other students have also waited. I will of course try to meet students on an appointment basis for those who cannot visit me during my office hours and hold "happy hour" office hours throughout the semester, but I cannot guarantee my availability outside of my office hours. So, plan that office visit accordingly!

Weekly Class Agenda:

For each class, students are expected to have completed the readings listed for that day in the course schedule. The general schedule will feature readings from the main textbook for Monday's classes, followed by supplemental readings later in the week:

- We shall spend Monday classes on the topics presented in the main textbook readings.
- Wednesday classes will feature more in-depth treatment of some of the important points of the week's readings, supplemental readings, in-class assignments, and activities.
- Friday's classes will be mainly for discussion. Throughout the semester, I shall ask you to prepare questions or write a journal reflection on the week's readings or a current event related to the material we have covered. You will submit these entries via a dropbox on eLC (due dates/times will be announced well in advance). These questions and journal reflections may be used as discussion points during the class, and will comprise 10% of your grade (see above).

Students are also expected to be familiar with current world events, and we shall begin each class period with a discussion of these events and how they bear on our studies to that point. As this is a comparative politics course in which you are expected to sharpen your critical thinking skills, you should try to check out at least two (2) news sources each day (preferably from different countries) and thoughtfully assess each source's presentation of the information. This may be most easily accomplished on-line by going to the "world news" section in any of the following news outlets or broadcast sources (this is a sample list – you may find others, but please NO BLOGS; you must check a legitimate news source).

Selected Suggested News Sources:

- The New York Times (www.nytimes.com – free [for now]; registration required)
 - NPR (www.npr.org, also carried on WUGA on-line and at 91.7FM)
 - The BBC On-Line (news.bbc.co.uk)
 - The Guardian On-Line (www.guardian.co.uk)
 - Le Monde (www.lemonde.fr – in French)
 - Der Spiegel (www.spiegel.de – in German)
 - The Christian Science Monitor (<http://www.csmonitor.com>)
 - Check out Google News (<http://news.google.com/nwshp?hl=en&tab=wn>), and choose "World" to see the world's news in the country of your choice – there are many news sources here in English (e.g., Canada, New Zealand, Australia, South Africa) as well as other languages.
 - With a Google account, you can use "Google Alerts" to set up and filter Google News to receive migration-related news items (under "Google Account Settings → Alert Settings").
