Administrative Accomplishments: The University of Georgia's MPA program is recognized globally as a leader in public affairs education, currently #5 in the 2026 U.S. News and World Report ranking of public affairs programs. During my term as MPA Director, the Department adopted a joint-degree program with the Master of Urban Planning and Design (MUPD), developed and expanded paid internships in rural Georgia communities, added a concentration in international and global policy in the MPA, implemented the MPA Mentoring program in cooperation with the Department of Psychology, improved enrollment yield to 60% in Fall 2022 (in comparison to a ten-year average of 42%), and successfully completed reaccreditation with NASPAA. Our team investments in the student experience and career services resulted in improved student satisfaction, as measured by the exit survey of graduating students. The number of students who would recommend the program to a friend was 86% in AY2023-24, with 97% of students reporting the degree prepared them for a professional career in public service.
