Course Summary

This graduate seminar is designed to provide students, from a variety of academic backgrounds, with a practical introduction to the fundamentals of international policy. The seminar examines the nature of power, the crafting of strategy, and the implementation of policy at the international level, and assesses contemporary global threats and trends to gain an enhanced understanding of the unique challenges that policymakers face in the twenty-first century. The main objective of the seminar is to provide students with the analytical tools necessary to critically examine international policy decisions, and encourage thought and debate about the effective conduct of contemporary policy. Furthermore, the seminar aims to refine student interests in and cultivate an in-depth knowledge of a specific global issue or policy, particularly in the International Security and Nonproliferation (ISN) or Human Security domain. Relatedly, the seminar is designed to aid students in preparing for internships and careers across the international policy community, to include, the U.S. government, international organizations, nonprofits, and consultancies. Among the career-oriented topics discussed will be the art of crafting professional resumes, constructing cover letters, preparing for the security clearance process, corresponding with prospective employers, sharpening interview performance, and refining written and oral communication skills. In addition to class discussions and course work, the seminar will include visits from external speakers within the U.S. government, international organizations, and the private sector to offer both policy perspectives and career advice.

Participation is defined by one's attitude toward and enthusiasm for the topic and assignments, contribution to lectures and discussion, participation in group activities, and class attendance. Reading assignments are listed on the syllabus the day they will be discussed in class. Each student is expected to complete the required readings and be prepared to participate actively in discussions.

Weekly Assignments

Weekly assignments will include the preparation of policy memos and various career documents. Policy memos should be no more than 2 pages and should briefly identify and discuss key elements of the weekly reading assignment. Most importantly each memo should summarize and put forth broader "lessons learned" that were gleaned from the readings (see Policy Writing memo). Additionally, students will be required to craft various career-oriented assignments, for example, resumes, cover letters, and responses to common interview questions. Students must email weekly assignments to the instructor by 12:00 on the Wednesday prior to class. The instructor will announce weekly assignments at the end of each class.

Strategy Case Study:

The strategy case study is a group project comprising a formal presentation and a policy memo. Each group will present a case study from Hal Brands, What Good is Grand Strategy? The intent of the case study is to carefully consider the relationship between strategy and policy and examine how various U.S. administrations have engaged with the international community. The presentation may address pertinent information, such as, the context of the international system, key actors and their objectives, the strengths and limitations of the administration's strategy, key policies and related instruments of power, and any major successes or failures.

Most importantly, each group should highlight, develop and discuss “lessons learned” that shed light on contemporary international policy issues. The policy memo must not exceed 3 pages. The strategy case study presentation and policy memo are due 20 September.

Policy Report and Presentation

The policy report and presentation is an individual project. The report should be tailored to the policy interests of each student. The intent of the report is to permit students to explore and develop an in-depth knowledge of a global issue and related international policy that aligns with their career aspirations. The report is a single source document that serves as an accessible and practical synopsis of an important global issue, relevant key actors and events, and proposes policy recommendations. The report must include, but is not limited to, the following sections: an executive summary, table of contents, chronology, background, literature review, key actors, policy recommendations, and a bibliography.

Topics for the policy report are due no later than 25 October. Policy presentations are due 15 November. The policy report is due 29 November.

Administrative Issues

The course syllabus is a general plan for the course; deviations announced to the class by the instructor may be necessary. Please contact me during the first week of the term if you have a conflict that will prevent you from attending class or completing an assignment on the scheduled date. Make-up assignments are only offered for university-excused absences.

All academic work must meet the standards contained in the University of Georgia’s “Culture of Honesty” (http://www.uga.edu/honesty/ahpd/culture\_honesty.htm). You are responsible to inform yourself about those standards before performing any academic work. My policy for academic dishonesty is very simple: Don’t plagiarize: If you turn in a written assignment that is (in part) not your own work you will receive a failing grade for the course. Disciplinary proceedings to dismiss you from the University may be initiated against you. I will not tolerate academic dishonesty.

The University of Georgia seeks to provide students with disabilities the opportunity to fully participate in educational programs and services. In keeping with this philosophy, it is University policy that students with documented disabilities receive reasonable accommodations through access to classroom information. If you require special accommodations because of a university-documented condition, please contact me during the first two weeks of the semester and we can work with the Disability Resource Center in order to achieve a positive outcome.
