Course Objectives

Technology and technological innovations are among the most powerful forces in our political and social world. In this course, we attempt to understand how technology has and continues to shape politics and society and to also understand what we might be headed for in the future. Through philosophy, social science and fiction, we will try to understand what the role of technology is for shaping the state in democratic and authoritarian nations in the past. We will then turn our attention to the future, exploring technological innovations hatched during the digital revolution such as artificial intelligence and blockchain that are reshaping our society. What I hope that you take away from this class is not only an understanding of the role of technology in politics, but a warning about some of the very real dangers that technology poses to human freedom if we are not vigilant.

Attendance and Participation

The most important content from this class will come from the lectures and group assignments during lecture time. Because of this and the rather technical nature of this class, attendance and participation in class is extremely important. If you cannot attend a lecture you must present me with a valid excuse at least 24 hours prior to the start of class unless the situation you encountered was an emergency.
Grading and Requirements (subject to change)

- Participation/discussion leader: 20% - described below.
- A midterm take home exam: 20% - you will have one week to complete.
- A final take home exam: 30% - you will have one week to complete.
- A short essay (15 double-spaced pages or less) on the political implications of a technology of your choice - 30%.

Discussion Leaders

Groups of students or individual students will choose a week to be a “discussion leader.” Discussion leaders will lead the class discussion for that week by choosing a reading and preparing a 15-30 minute presentation summarizing the reading and proposing a series of 3-5 discussion points to start off our discussion about the content. Every student MUST participate in a group as a discussion leader at least once. Discussion leader groups can have a maximum of 4 people and if you do not sign up for one week as a discussion leader you will be assigned to a week.
